

Editorial Note on Virology and Infectious Diseases

Venkatraman Pitchaikannu*

Department of Medical Physics, Bharathidasan University, Tiruchirappalli, Tamil Nadu, India

Correspondence: Venkatraman P, Department of Medical Physics, Bharathidasan University, Tiruchirappalli, Tamil Nadu, India, Tel: +91 9489325526, E-mail: venkat00108@gmail.com

Received: June 21, 2020; Accepted: July 06, 2020; Published: July 13, 2019

Copyright: © 2020 Venkatraman P. This is an open-access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution License, which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original author and source are credited.

I am pleased to introduce Science Assist International New Journal of Virology and Infectious Diseases (JVID), from the publisher in the area of recent virus and infectious diseases. JVID provides a really exciting opportunity to consider the truly interdisciplinary nature of virus destinations at a time of great change across the wider diseases site. The objective of JVID is to publish informed, high-quality and original research papers alongside relevant and understanding reviews. As such, the journal aspires to be exciting, attractive and available, at the same time integrative and challenging. Each issue of the journal will contain three types of papers. The first, case report is new research area in the field of virus and publish the patient case report. The second, Critical Reviews, will provide a critical and concise yet comprehensive and contemporary review of a particular theme specific to the virus and diseases. The third and final type of paper, Research Papers, will be more useful to identify the new types of virus. To publish the new methods for develop the virus and preparing methodology. All types of papers, however, will be subject to the journal's double-blind review process.

The main reason in this journal got famous was because of its view of society; you used to publish number of articles related to social issues which were taken care of at that time. But now, we hardly see one or two items in the journal which are related to social problems. As I am very fond of your journal, I am writing this letter. We, as editor of your journal, urge you to refocus your attention on the matters that matter. Pointless to say, any papers that you wish to submit, either independently or collaboratively, are much respected and will make a substantial contribution to the early development and success of the journal. Best wishes and thank you in advance for your contribution to the Journal of Virology and Infectious Diseases.

Citation: Venkatraman P. Editorial Note on Virology and Infectious Diseases. J Virol Infect Dis. 2020;1(1):1-1.